

Inaugural Address of the General Manager

By the General Manager
May 20, 2019

My Fellow Eagles,

I stand here before you, so humbly honored and proud to serve in a capacity to which you have not only qualified me for but chosen me to fulfill. In my experience requisition, I thought that serving as President of the Indian Forest Club Association was the greatest honor. But today, standing here with you is the highest honor of my life and I thank you for it. Several days ago, we ratified a constitution, a new governing document that carries some of the previous but also new liberties and opportunities. Our constitution is real and is a working document. Through its power, we hold steadfast the mysteries of our course and journey.

In today's United States, today's Georgia and today's Decatur, we exercise the ancient and god given right, to pursue the things that make us happiest. This new generation has created for us the platform to do the impossible and achieve the incredible. By the words of constitution and the spirit of our hopes, we embrace those platforms and strive to make the Indian Forest Companies the greatest and most impactful organization to ever exist.

The technology that's available to us, the easy means of gaining internet appearance, becoming a social media sensation and a relevant coffee conversation, is so common yet so amazing within itself. These benefits allow us to reach the world beyond our reach and to impact the nations and communities beyond our sight.

And so today, as we share in the start of a new day for the Indian Forest Companies Incorporated and inaugurate this administration to focus on building the foundation, let us build one with integrity and with dignity. Let us build a foundation that will last for generations to come. Through the power of our constitution and the wisdom of our voice, let us change the culture.

As I have stated in my inauguration as President of the Indian Forest Club Association on July 9, 2000, I state here on May 20, 2019, I vow this day to use the full weight and power of my office, to lead this organization with greatness and a full voice of power. This statement now leads me to the question that tickles everyone's ears here today and around the world, what is the hope and dream of the General Manager?

I dream of an organization that changes lives and communities. An organization that empowers our youth and not push them into the brinks of violence, drugs and gangs. I dream of safe communities. I dream of unity and peace. To be clear and frank, the hope and dream of the General Manager, is for the Indian Forest Companies Incorporated to be the agent and model of change and hope.

And so I say mighty eagles, let us confront our challenges, as there will be many. Let us climb our obstacles as there will be mountains to climb. Let us soar and win, achieve and dream together like never before. Thank you, God bless each and everyone of you and God bless the Indian Forest Companies Incorporated.
